PRESIDENT JUDGE LINEBAUGH: Good morning, everyone. I want to welcome you to this Minute of Respect for our departed colleague, Samuel F. Meisenhelder. At this time I just want to mention that it is the tradition of our Bench and Bar of York County to honor a departed member by having a Minute of Respect presented.

This memorial proceeding is initiated by a motion that is made by a member of the Bar, who will present the Minute of Respect. The Minute is then seconded by other members of the Bar and Judges who have knowledge and are familiar with our departed member.

This tradition is important because it allows our Bar Association to have an opportunity to memorialize professional attributes of a departed member and perhaps add an anecdotal story or memory. It also is important because it serves an ongoing history for our Bar Association for future generations. This is a Bar proceeding, and only members of the Bar may second the Minute.

I would ask if there are any members of the Bar who are going to be seconding the Minute to, please, come forward, and use one of the microphones.

At this time I want to recognize the Honorable Joseph C. Adams, President of the York County Bar Association. Judge Adams.

JUDGE ADAMS: Thank you, President Judge Linebaugh. Members of the Bench, members of the Bar, friends and family, it is my sad duty as President of the Bar Association to announce the passing of one of our members, Sam Meisenhelder. Sam passed away on December 20th, 2012, at the age of 89. At this time I would ask Don Reihart to stand and present the Minute.

PRESIDENT JUDGE LINEBAUGH: Attorney Reihart.

ATTORNEY REIHART: May it please the Court, it is a distinct privilege and a special honor to move this Court for a Minute to officially remember Attorney Samuel F. Meisenhelder for his service as a lawyer, public official, and treasured member of his family and of this community.

Sam was born on January 7th, 1923, in Dover Township, York County, Pennsylvania. Sam's father, Dr. Edmund Meisenhelder, was a Phi Beta Kappa student and a Johns Hopkins trained physician, who had studied abroad learning the newest surgical techniques of the day, including the lifesaving use of a newly designed tracheotomy procedure. I understand Dr. Meisenhelder practiced at York Hospital for a while but felt that the constraint of practice there was not in the best interest of his clients, so he founded the West Side Sanitarium, which was a 60-bed hospital, to provide updated care for its patients. Dr. Meisenhelder owned two or three farms that were used to supply fresh milk and produce to the hospital. Sam Meisenhelder grew up on one of these farms.

In 1995 Sam's family prompted him to write a brief autobiography, which he dutifully and playfully prepared. He discussed his early life in that autobiography, and I'm going to read just a few excerpts from him. The point that he was making was that he was a goal-oriented person even at a very early age. And he's describing himself here in the third person and moves to the first person later on.

Sam wrote, "Because he was a country boy, his early companions were farm boys. Thus, it seemed perfectly logical that his first announced goal was to drive a manure spreader behind six white horses."

Perhaps that foretold what was going to happen later on, the legal profession.

"This early focusing of direction seemed to please his parents because they bragged about this goal to a number of friends. His early years were devoted to finding ways to avoid piano and flute practice and to irritating his older sister and brother, an activity at which he became quite skilled. Although they were considered by everyone to be the intellectual members of that generation, they never showed the early flare for goal-setting that he had. He followed these siblings through the city public school system until he left York to follow his brother through the Gunnery school during the high school years."

The Gunnery school is located in New England.

He writes, "Gunnery was great. Those were four years of alternating uncertainty and confidence building. I was very busy with extracurricular activities: Football, ice hockey, the literary magazine of the school, and the glee club. As a senior, I became the editor of the school yearbook, a job which I took seriously and of which I was rather proud.

It then became time to consider college. Amherst and Yale were considered. After all, the Gunnery was in New England. When Swarthmore was suggested by my father, I was not really interested. It was co-educational and I thought I wanted a boy's school. However, having proved that I was an early goal setter, I proved that I was open and flexible in my opinions. I made the adjustment to co-education immediately. Little did I realize what destiny had in store for me."

Sam entered Swarthmore College as a pre-med student. It was there that he met Zoe Steliotes, a beautiful new co-ed, who eventually became his wife and lifelong companion. Sam's education at Swarthmore was interrupted by World War II and the loss of a foreman who ran his father's farms. Sam tried to enlist in the Army, but due to a severe concussion that he had suffered from an injury, he was refused military induction.

Sam moved his family to the farm in Dover Township. During the '40s and '50s, he engaged in farming, and he and his wife had four children: Helen; Carol; Marguerite, known as Rita; and Joan.

And he writes now this excerpt from his autobiography: "As destiny would have it, Zoe married a farmer instead of a doctor. I loved the hard work, the animals, and the good life. Zoe helped with the farm work and took care of the girls. We did this for eight years. All of this was great, but I knew I didn't want to be milking cows when I became 65 years old. Now I am glad I decided that. After eight years on the farm, I became a real estate salesman, mostly commercial and industrial, and then a real estate broker."

In 1957 Sam decided upon a career in the law at age 35 and enrolled at the Dickinson School of Law. For the next four years, he balanced the rigors of family life, a thriving real estate practice, and the study of law.

In 1961 he graduated from Dickinson School of Law, and in the fall of that year, he moved his family to a grand old house at 440 Linden Avenue, where he and Zoe continued to live until they moved to the Brethren Home in Cross Keys in their senior years.

Sam began the practice of law with Markowitz, Kagen & Griffith in 1964. He later opened his own law offices practicing as a solo practitioner for most of his 50-year-long career. He then associated his practice with Chris Menges and then later with me.

Sam had a broad-ranging practice, although he emphasized practicing in the areas of real estate and estate practice. Sam was involved in politics. He ran for Prothonotary in 1971 and served as York County Prothonotary from January 1972 through December of 1975.

I was District Attorney for the last year or two of Sam's service as Prothonotary, but I really came to know him well in 1992 when he became the Solicitor for York County. Sam and I had discussed the need for someone to handle the County's litigation practice, and I was fortunate enough to have Sam ask me and to entrust me with the responsibility to do that.

There was one project we performed together that perhaps has some historical significance. When Sam assumed the responsibility to manage the Solicitor's office, it became very clear to both of us that there was no organization at all of any of the resolutions and ordinances that had been passed from the beginning of time up until the time we had come into the office.

So together, we codified, and when necessary, wrote, edited, or modified what has now been designated as the York County Code.

It was at this time that I became aware of Sam's expertise in grammar. Maybe I should call it an eccentricity, because he had strong feelings about how a sentence should be written and he would spend substantial time polishing things that he wrote. I found that he was a stickler in making certain that things were written in accordance with his understanding of the rules and principles of the English language and learned that he knew a lot more about it than I did.

Later on when he joined me in the practice of law and I came to read some of his wills and trusts, it became clear to me that he was a rare individual who was far better than I in expressing the desires of his clients in the wills and the trusts that he had written. I used form and boilerplates whenever possible. For him, however, writing was a labor of love.

Sam Meisenhelder was a fine lawyer, but he was also a man of many interests. He was a pilot. I remember spending time with him talking about the joy that he received in piloting a single engine plane. I remember thinking that he had a daring side to him that was easily missed because he was so mild of manner in his daily activities and his relationship with people.

Sam was very active and involved in the York Jaycees, where he established long-lasting relationships with Berney Wagner, John Schmidt, Charlie Wolfe, and John Zimmerman, just to name a few.

Sam and his wife loved to travel. They would frequently travel to Greece, Switzerland, Austria, and Germany, but the most important people in Sam's life were his wife and his four children.

In his autobiography he states of his children, "We never see them often enough but are grateful for the times that we do have with each other."

Sam enjoyed music. He and his wife sang in the church choir. He was involved in his church and in many civic organizations. He was a member of the Rotary Club of York, where he served as the past president. He was a member of the Penn State York

Advisory Board for 50 years, where he served as legal counsel and was a life member of the York County Agricultural Society.

Zoe predeceased Sam on December 16th, 2009. Sam died on December 20th, 2012. Sam is survived by his four daughters and their spouses: Helen D. and William E. Groft, Carol M. and Donald Lowe, Margarite (Rita) and Gregory Strickler, and Joan M. and Gary Graff. He is also survived by 12 grandchildren and 4 great-grandchildren.

All of us in the Bar who knew Sam recognized that he was a man of special qualities. He was a fine lawyer and a man of integrity, refinement, and civility. His presence as a member of this Bar and his life here in York County has left us with a legacy of good works and good memories.

I am also here to second by proxy this Minute for Judge Michael Brillhart, who provided me with some of the information that I've just read.

Judge Brillhart described Sam as a gentleman's gentleman and a close friend and a valued member of this Bar and this community.

Judge Brillhart expresses his regret that he could not be here to do this in person, and on his behalf, I second the Minute.

Also, Your Honor, I have a letter that is written by Bruce C. Bankenstein, a longtime member of this Bar, who could not be present, but he has sent this letter to second the Minute for Sam Meisenhelder.

And it is addressed, "Dear Judge Adams," but it's probably addressed to all of us.

"It is with regret that I cannot attend this special meeting for presentation of the Minute to honor Samuel F. Meisenhelder on May 9th, 2014. I would certainly be present if I were able to do so. I have known Sam for a long time. He and Zoe attended my wedding. We were in the same Rotary club. I worked on various legal cases and transactions with Sam over the decades, as well as maintaining contact with him and his family in one form or another outside of the law.

First and foremost, Sam was a gentleman. Sam dealt with clients, adversaries, and colleagues professionally and honorably at all times. His legal skills were of the highest caliber. He was always well-prepared for every matter in which I dealt with him. It was always a pleasure to work with and to get together with Sam. The York County Bar Association is, indeed, diminished by his passing."

And on his behalf, I second the Minute. Thank you.

PRESIDENT JUDGE LINEBAUGH: Thank you very much, Attorney Reihart. Would any other members of the Bar care to rise and second the Minute?

Attorney Menges.

ATTORNEY MENGES: Thank you, Your Honor. President Judge Linebaugh and my esteemed members of the Bench, members of the Bar, and family, I do rise to second this Minute for Sam Meisenhelder. I do so with great respect.

Sam was my mentor. I started clerking with him while I was in law school in 1974, and he took me into his practice in 1976. We remained together until the mid-'80s, and we remained friends literally until his death. I'm fond of telling people that any good attribute I have as an attorney I learned it from Sam, and any bad attribute I have as an attorney I picked up on my own. There's a lot of truth to that.

Interesting, the comments made by Mr. Reihart about Sam's proclivity for grammar and proper grammar. It took me a number of years to get him to laugh at my joke, that a preposition was a terrible thing to end a sentence with. He finally did laugh and understood that I was paying respect to the English grammar and to him with that joke.

I would like to just emphasize for a couple of moments Sam as a gentleman. At his eulogy that term was mentioned several times. Sam was a gentleman with his family, in his private life. He was a gentleman as an attorney. It is hard to describe. He would pay attention. He would open the door for a lady. He would never think of starting to talk to someone until they were finished. He just treated everybody with respect.

I remember vividly that one of his clients was a very elderly and very poor, black lady whose property was going to be lost to a tax sale. She couldn't pay him, but he was not a respecter of people of means. He treated everyone equally and everyone with respect. He took care of this lady's legal problems. I know he never got paid, but that was Sam.

With Sam, there was no need of a pro bono program. He took care of people that came through the door and asked for legal services and couldn't pay for them. He just treated everyone with great respect, with compassion, with care, and he was a gentleman in all other respects.

As Attorney Reihart mentioned, he had great interests. Many of them were quite intellectual, and I could never quite understand some of them. They were beyond me, but that was okay. He loved music, the arts. He loved to travel. And I guess the part about Sam that perhaps boldfaces his life was when his wife, Zoe, became ill and she had to get a great deal of care and she was wheelchair-bound.

He devoted himself to her. He took care of Zoe like any, I guess, really devoted husband would take care of his wife. But we see far too little of that today. He just took care of her in a way that certainly serves as an example for me and for many.

As was already stated, Sam was a gentleman in the practice of law. He was generally a very soft-spoken person, but he could be very aggressive in the courtroom.

On the other hand, there was no need for a code of civility. He wrote one and taught it to me before there was ever a written code of civility. He wouldn't think of ever mistreating another attorney.

He wouldn't file a lawsuit if it was even possibly spurious. He would tell a client you don't have a case, and if they didn't like that and they fired him, that was okay. To him, the legal system and the Bench and the Bar was something to be respected and revered.

He believed in the rule of law and just set a tremendous example for many and, particularly, a tremendous example for me.

It's just with a great sense of loss, but with a very great sense of appreciation, that I rise to second the Minute for Sam Meisenhelder. Thank you.

PRESIDENT JUDGE LINEBAUGH: Thank you, Attorney Menges.

Attorney McCullough.

ATTORNEY MCCULLOUGH: May it please the Court, friends, family, I'm honored to speak as part of this Minute. Sam Meisenhelder was a great person, who was also great for the practice of law here in York County.

Regardless of whether he was acting as a Prothonotary or as a lawyer in private practice, Sam treated the parties, the lawyers, and also the issues with respect.

Those of us that began as lawyers in the early '70s here in York were fortunate because we dealt with professionals like Sam Meisenhelder, Jon Countess, and Lavere Senft. Sam showed us new lawyers the way professionals conducted themselves. By his example, Sam Meisenhelder set the standard for us in how we ought to practice law, and, hopefully, we all shall remember him. Thank you.

PRESIDENT JUDGE LINEBAUGH: Thank you, Attorney McCullough.

Any other members of the Bar? Attorney Hoffmeyer.

ATTORNEY HOFFMEYER: President Judge Linebaugh, members of the Bench, family members, members of the Bar, I'm one of the few I think in this room who graduated with Sam from law school, and you might notice there is a little bit of difference in our ages.

What is interesting is that Sam ran a full-time real estate office while attending law school. In fact, he showed my then wife and I a home in York New Salem, which we didn't buy because it didn't have any closets in the bedroom. You seem to need closets in a bedroom.

Also, another member of the Bar, Ned Stankoski, was my first wife's cousin and lived with us frequently during the summer-time, so when Ned was somewhere around 12, 14 years old, Sam called me up one day. He said, Bill, how would you like to share the price of some aviation fuel and fly with me down to Atlantic City? I said, Sure, if I could take Ned along with me.

So we went with Sam. We took off from York Airport. That is the first and only time that I ever flew in a private airplane, and it was a lousy day to fly. It was muggy and cloudy and you couldn't see the ground.

But we flew out of York Airport, down to Atlantic City, and landed and spent some time there, and came back to York, which was kind of interesting, because even in those days, I was a boater on the Chesapeake, and we came flying over the Conewago Dam, turned, and just followed the Susquehanna River back to York.

My last remembrance of Sam, because he and I remained friends throughout his career, is that I was having dinner at Sydney's Restaurant in East Berlin not too long before Zoe's passing. Sam wheeled Zoe into the dining room, and I spent a few minutes talking to both of them while they were having dinner. I was having dinner with a friend of mine.

Sam was a great guy. He and I periodically would contact each other with regard to a case we might have in real estate and discuss it a little bit, and we'll certainly miss him.

PRESIDENT JUDGE LINEBAUGH: Thank you.

Attorney Bitzer.

ATTORNEY BITZER: Thank you, Your Honor.

To the Bench, members of the Bar, and the family, I would like to join in seconding the Minute. I first became acquainted with Sam and perhaps aware of Sam in the 1960s while a teenager at St. John's Episcopal Church on Beaver Street in York. It was a time I shared with Judge Linebaugh, Divorce Master Dorion, Rick Martin, and, of course, the Vedders all at that same period of time.

During that period of time, Sam was probably not significant to me as a lawyer, but he was significant to me as the father of four attractive teenage girls. And for that, I probably knew him more. I was fortunate to be able to form a friendship and an enduring friendship with his daughter Rita, which is a friendship I continue to cherish today.

I would fast-forward then from the '60s to the '80s, a time after working as a broadcaster and I returned to York, and as they used to say, hung out a shingle, naively, I suppose, not imagining how hard a solo practice can be.

As such, though, Sam was very supportive. I would echo Attorney Menges' words as a mentor, as a gentleman. Sam was someone who said if you need any help, give me a call, and he meant it. And you could call him and say, Sam, I don't know how to do this, and Sam would say, Oh, you can handle it. Take it over here, see that person, go to that counter.

And he talked me through many things which you just don't find in the rules and that you don't find in the law. It is that sort of unspoken thing you learn over time. He was helpful to me in that regard.

In the late '80s Sam assisted me and my wife when we purchased our farm. He did the legal work for that transaction. Of course, he would accept no payment for that, and he gave us, as a housewarming gift, a brick of Greek, I remember it, Greek espresso coffee because he thought we would need the caffeine to keep us going as we renovated the farm. He was absolutely right.

You could never pass --at least for me, I could never pass Sam on the street without stopping to chat. You would not say hello and walk by. You would stop and chat with Sam on the street, and I think probably on the street I spent more time with Sam than anywhere else. He was always encouraging. He was always interested. He was always positive.

And in our later contacts, I think we talked more about children and, importantly, about cows more than we did the law. Sam also had advice on cows.

So for that reason, I join in seconding the Minute. I miss Sam as well. Thank you.

PRESIDENT JUDGE LINEBAUGH: Thank you, Attorney Bitzer.

Attorney Vaughn.

ATTORNEY PETER VAUGHN: May it please the Court, members of the Court, fellow members of the Bar, family and friends of Sam Meisenhelder, my name is Peter Vaughn. I also rise to second the Minute in honor of Sam Meisenhelder on behalf of my father, Glenn C. Vaughn, who is a 44-year member of this Bar Association.

My father regrets that he could not be here personally to honor this very honorable man and attorney. Here are his words: "For the first couple years of practice, I spent a lot of time in legal research in the law library in the old courthouse. There I interacted regularly with Sam Meisenhelder. He welcomed me warmly to the Bar. He offered to help me. He did help me. He could not have been nicer. I considered him a true friend and colleague.

We had legal dealings and tried cases against each other, the last one being a will contest in the Orphans' Court after he was Of Counsel to the Blakey firm. Whatever the contact I had with Sam, he was always pleasant and enjoyable and fair. He was a well-prepared and tough adversary, but always ethical and honest.

I have many fond memories of Sam. I can visualize him and Zoe happily jumping to catch beads thrown from parade floats at Mardi Gras in New Orleans, when I enjoyed their congeniality during a long weekend trip there in the early 1980s.

I can relive the pleasant anticipation of a chance meeting when I would see him approaching on Market Street. It was just always a pleasure to be in his company.

I have tried over the years to welcome new members of this Bar and to help and advise them in the same manner in which Sam welcomed, helped, and advised me. A hundred years from now, some young attorney in this Bar Association will feel as if he or she belongs because Sam's kindness will have been paid forward. That's quite a legacy."

Thank you, Your Honor.

PRESIDENT JUDGE LINEBAUGH: Thank you, Attorney Vaughn. Any other members of the Bar who would like to second the Minute?

Are there members of the Bench who would care to second the Minute?

SENIOR JUDGE UHLER: As we all know, Judge Brillhart is one for thoroughness, and not only did he share some comments with Don Reihart, he has requested that I incorporate these words into the record.

He has asked me to express his regrets that he was unable to attend today's Minute of Respect in the memory of his good friend Sam Meisenhelder and extends his condolences once again to the Meisenhelder clan and, in particular, Helen and Bill Groft.

Judge Brillhart has asked me to read his remarks into today's record in his absence:

"Sam came to the practice of law in 1964. At 40 years of age, and for almost the next 50 years, he engaged in that practice with honor, diligence, humility, and dignity. Sam, simply stated, practiced law in a fashion that was in accord with the way our profession is supposed to practice.

He diligently and vigorously protected and pursued his clients' interests yet did so in a way being respectful to his adversaries and deferential to the tribunal. He was at all times patient, courteous, and a true gentleman. He was a credit to our profession.

The only thing more important to Sam than his chosen profession was his family: His beloved wife, Zoe; their four daughters; their spouses; and his grandchildren and great-grandchildren. He was devoted to them all, and I know they have and will miss him.

Although some 20 years separated us chronologically, Sam and I came to the practice of law only five years apart, he in 1964 and I in 1969.

As I am sure Don Reihart in his primary Minute has recounted, Sam was a bit restless in his early years, trying his hand, and successfully, I'm told, at dairy farming, managing a car dealership, and establishing his own real estate firm.

But at middle age Sam decided to pursue a career in the law. In 1957 while balancing the rigors of family life and raising four daughters and supervising his real estate business, Sam enrolled full time at the Dickinson School of Law and graduating in 1961.

At that time, and in the next several years that followed, a number of events occurred that drew our lives and careers together that resulted in a very close bond between us.

First, in the fall of 1961, Sam and Zoe relocated their family from their rural agrarian environs in West Manchester Township into the thriving metropolis of the inner City of York. This brought their four daughters from the West York Schools to the York City Schools, and, particularly, their firstborn, Helen, to York High, where she came to the attention of one of my best friends, Bill Groft.

Although this new environ initially left Helen a bit conflicted over some remaining ties and friendships at West York, Bill persisted in his affection and eventually won over Helen. And in January of 1966, while in their junior year at the University of Michigan, they decided to marry.

On January 2nd, 1966, a day I still vividly recall, as I stood next to Bill as his best man, Sam walked Helen down the aisle at St. John's Episcopal Church and gave her to Bill. My wife, Deb, and I married ten days later.

Our families have remained close over the years as we have raised our children and experienced an additional generation of grandchildren. Sam and I always shared updates in these regards when we saw one another.

Sam started his practice with the firm of Markowitz, Kagen & Griffith in 1964. As I neared graduation from law school, I sought out Sam requesting that he act as my sponsor and preceptor. He demurred, saying that he hadn't yet practiced long enough, and, rather, suggested that Lou Markowitz act as preceptor.

At about that time Tip Himes' father, also Lawrence T. Himes and known to us as HUD, died in 1960, or thereabouts. Hud's wife, Sally, Tip's stepmom, called me a law student and asked if I was interested in his law library. I had no place to keep it, nor the means to pay the continuing subscription fees, so I asked Sam if he could house it and keep it current pending either me or Tip reclaiming it later.

Sam graciously accepted, and for the next ten years or so, the L. T. Himes Law Library moved between Sam, me, and Tip.

Finally, Sam was a lifelong Republican, and in 1971 he decided to run for Prothonotary. Sam sought out support far and wide. Although I have long family ties to the Democratic Party, my father being a strong union man and railroader, I registered as a Republican so that I could vote for Sam for the spring primary. This was the source of the same political discord in my family.

But Sam always enjoyed telling people that he was the reason I was a lifelong Republican. Of course, I recognize the advantage of being a long-registered Republican when I ran for the Bench in 1991.

I always considered Sam to be a mentor, for although we had only practiced together briefly at Markowitz, Kagen & Griffith, I knew Sam well. I knew his character, his dedication to his clients, and his chosen profession, and I valued very highly his wisdom and advice, which I sought out often.

Sam's restlessness in his early years when he farmed, operated a car dealership, and ran his real estate office, faded away when he graduated from law school and he hung out his shingle that read Samuel F. Meisenhelder, Attorney at Law.

Sam served his clients and his chosen profession well. He will be missed yet remembered fondly. Again, I extend my condolences to his extended family."

That's Judge Brillhart's final comments that he made.

Judge Brillhart certainly has touched upon many of the character attributes as well as Don's initial Minute of Respect regarding Sam.

I had the good fortune to meet with Sam while he was studying for the Bar examination and while Helen was attending Bucknell before she moved on to the University of Michigan.

And that initial encounter with him became the preface for many fond, remembered conversations I had with him, and I recall that at any time, be it scheduled or unscheduled happen chance encounters that I would have on the street with him, it was always a positive experience. He never spoke ill of anyone, and it was always a joy to share the information he loved to share about his family and their goings-on, and it was a real joy to be a friend of Sam's.

His focus on civility is regrettably often lost on the profession's mind today. He would never think to not answer an attorney's telephone call. He would never think to not answer a Judge's call. You always had an immediate attention from him, and it's the kind of professional attribute that regrettably we have lost.

Sam and Zoe also enjoyed music, and I fondly remember encountering them at the Wheatland Chorale performances that they attended many times. They were situated in Lancaster County, but it was always a real pleasure to have an opportunity to once again encounter them.

Sam, Zoe are greatly missed, a great loss to our legal community as a whole. My condolences to the family.

PRESIDENT JUDGE LINEBAUGH: Any other members of the Bench?

JUDGE COOK: I also rise to second the Minute that so ably was presented by Attorney Reihart.

They say the first impression of someone you meet can sometimes be a lasting impression, and that is the case with my meeting with Sam many years ago. I think I may have still been in law school or maybe in my first year as clerk to Judge Miller, but I met Sam in a retail establishment in the center City of York.

I was introduced to him by a college friend, who had graduated from law school a couple years ahead of me and knew Sam, and upon introduction, Sam's response to me was, "You're too pretty to be a lawyer," which at the time I wasn't really sure how to take.

Today I would welcome that kind of a comment, but at the time I was like, okay, well, Sam's about the generation of my dad, so just say thank you and move on. And that's what I did.

What I came to find in the years after that was that Sam was perhaps one of the most polite, courteous, welcoming gentlemen that I could meet at the Bar in York County. We often passed each other on Market Street doing our business and would see him in the lawyer lounge of the old courthouse.

I became a Rotarian in the York Rotary Club, so I would see him on a weekly basis there. He was always the most gracious gentleman you could ever ask for.

I got to know Zoe a little bit from community activities, and I know that Sam and Zoe were tremendous supporters of York County and York City, in particular, and you would see them at lots of functions together, and Sam was completely devoted to her, particularly, after she became ill.

The loss of Sam and Zoe is a tremendous loss to the York community, and my condolences to the family.

PRESIDENT JUDGE LINEBAUGH: Thank you. Judge Thompson.

JUDGE THOMPSON: I'm John Thompson. I rise to second the remarks and the minute ably presented by Don Reihart.

Sam was a friend of my family's, and I became privileged to become his friend as a result of the friendship with my father. We spent lunches together on many occasions, and despite the attempts to maintain a political atmosphere in discussion at those lunches, Sam would usually divert them to a travel story, a story of a concert that he and Zoe had been to.

Sam Meisenhelder is the kind of person that when you saw him coming down the street, you automatically smiled that you were going to have a chance to talk to him.

I do ascribe to all of the comments. I miss those lunches and I miss Sam. My condolences to the family.

PRESIDENT JUDGE LINEBAUGH: Judge Renn.

JUDGE RENN: President Judge, colleagues of the Bench and Bar, I rise to second the Minute so ably presented here today.

One of Sam's many interests was photography. He was a very accomplished photographer. Back in the late '70s when I came to York, I joined the York Camera Club. Sam was a member, if not an officer, if I recall correctly.

I was taking pictures with my Kodak Instamatic camera, and Sam had his 35 millimeter, a tremendously huge, complicated thing, and he would come in at our weekly --I guess, monthly photo contests and have these spectacular photos of ordinary things around York County.

Karla M. Forbes
Official Court Reporter

And, of course, as the judging progressed and the critiquing, Sam was always able to say what he thought, and he did it delicately and he did it appropriately, and I learned so much about photography from those sessions with Sam with his critiques, with his ability.

He helped me pick out the first 35 millimeter camera that I ever got. I still have it to this day. He was just a joy to be with and a joy to see that talent in that arena. We'll miss him.

PRESIDENT JUDGE LINEBAUGH: Thank you, Judge Renn.
Any other Judges?

I would also like to second the Minute. I have made quite a few notes that talk about Attorney Meisenhelder, and everything I was going to say and would have said has been said. I won't repeat it. He was just an incredible gentleman. It was just his nature to be a proper person. I have often thought that if all of the members of our Bar had the same quality that Sam Meisenhelder had and practiced law the way he did, we would be such a tremendous community of legal scholars and models of civility.

The other thing I do want to say is that the name Sam Meisenhelder is a great name for a lawyer, but I never got to call him that except in talking to other people about Sam Meisenhelder.

When I had first met him, we had moved into York close to the neighborhood where Sam and Zoe lived a few years later. As Attorney Bitzer had pointed out, they were wonderful people, and Zoe was an incredibly beautiful and handsome woman. And they had four beautiful daughters, so there were always people around the Meisenhelder's home. They were such friendly people. We went to church together. He was the church photographer.

So when I first met him, it was Mr. Meisenhelder. When we practiced law, and we had a number of occasions where we had transactions together. He always would take his time. He was always correct. He wanted to get it right. So many times he would provide me with documents and get my comments on them, and he was just a fair individual.

When we were finished a transaction, I was confident that because of his abilities, it had been done correctly for his client and for mine, which was a wonderful thing.

When I started practicing law, he was the Prothonotary here in York County, and I always called him Mr. Prothonotary. And in practice or on the street, it was always Attorney Meisenhelder. I just had such respect for him that I couldn't bring myself to refer to him as Sam.

And after I became Judge, he never referred to me as anything but Judge Linebaugh. He was just an incredible individual. Our community is so much better off for having had him as part of it and, especially, our legal community.

And it was a tremendous honor for me to have been involved with him for so many years of my life.

We now direct that a copy of these Minutes and comments be spread upon the Minutes of York County Bar Association, that a copy of the comments be provided to the family of Samuel F. Meisenhelder. I would ask you all to, please, rise for a moment of silence before we adjourn in memory of Samuel F. Meisenhelder.

We are now adjourned.

CERTIFICATION

I hereby certify that the proceedings and evidence are contained fully and accurately in the notes taken by me on the hearing of the above cause, and that this copy is a correct transcript of the same.
